5. If you have additional comments about your participation in this course or suggestions about how to make the course more engaging, please share them here:

I can't explain it well, but using McGraw Hill's Connect Book homework often left me feeling utterly dyslexic after relatively short periods of working on the homework, sometimes as early as 10-15 minutes into the assignments, making completing the assignments difficult. I would suspect it has something to do with the way the prompts are worded.

9. If you have additional comments or suggestions about how the course or the course website/Canvas was organized, please share them here:

I don't think the volume of discussion boards is appropriate for the length of the course. As I understand, OU's policy for online courses is to have discussions in all online courses, but it seemed like there was far too much to be justified for each unit.

15. If you have additional comments or suggestions about the assignments, reading materials, discussions, online materials, projects, rehearsals, performances, exams, or other learning components in this course, please share them here:

Exam 3 seemed to have a major disconnect in what was taught in the course assignments and what was expected on the Exam.

I have never taken a course where the professor was so quick to respond to questions or concerns over email, additionally, Professor Khademorezaian has a wealth of experience and information to share and add to the discussion boards in his class, helping students connect the dots on their arguments and get a glimpse of the bigger picture in Economics.

24. Which elements of this course had the most positive impact on your engagement and/or learning?

I believe that the case studies had the most impact. It required me to know more about the subject in depth in order to explain real-life economic activities.
